

Frederic Remington was an American painter, illustrator, sculptor, and writer who specialized in depictions of the Old American West, specifically concentrating on the last quarter of 19th Century American West and images of cowboys, American Indians and the US Cavalry. He attended art school at Yale University, the only male in the freshman year. His focus was firmly on the people and animals of the West, with landscape usually of secondary importance. Remington was one of the first American artists to illustrate the true gait of the horse in motion. The galloping horse became Remington's signature subject, copied, and interpreted by many Western artists who followed him.
